

Consider the following guidelines when adapting an Increasing Women in Neuroscience toolkit presentation for an audience outside of the United States.

- Highlight and strengthen the presentation's message by making it more relevant to the local situation. For example, you could:
  - Supplement the provided data with statistics from your country.
  - Highlight the ways in which the local culture may or may not contribute to gender inequity.
  - Provide examples of bias that reflect the diversity within your community.

- Define terms that may not be self-explanatory and replace academic titles, such as assistant professor or associate professor, with familiar terminology.

- Translate toolkit presentation to primary language if intended audience does not have sufficient mastery of the English language.

Have you hosted your own workshop? How did you tailor the presentation to impact your community?
